THE MILITARY YESTERDAY EXPRESSED SURprise at how powerful weapons and thousands of bullets supposed to be kept in the government armory ended up virtually in the backyard of the Ampatuan clan.

Wearing bulletproof vests, soldiers and police the other day dug up antitank weapons, assault rifles and machine guns from a vacant lot a few hundred meters from one of the houses of the Ampatuan family—a known political ally of President Macapagal-Arroyo—in Shariff Aguak in Maguindanao province.

Some of the firearms and the boxes of ammunition bore the markings of "Department of National Defense Arsenal," "PNP [Philippine National Police] Camp Crame," police said.

Sen. Rodolfo Biazon, former AFP chief of staff, said he was "aghast" at the find and said he would ask for a Senate investigation next week on who was responsible for giving such a huge arms cache presumably to the Ampatuans.

"Only the military can have this weapon," he insisted in a phone interview. "Nobody can possess them, except for the military and the police, even for a while."

PNP chief Jesus Verzosa was taken aback on learning that the recovered firearms included one antitank weapon. He

Palace forms body to dismantle private armies

By TJ Burgonio, Marlon Ramos and Nikko Dizon

A COMMISSION TO OVERSEE the dismantling of private armies in Maguindanao and other hot spots in the country was yesterday ordered formed by President Macapagal-Arroyo.

The President issued the order during a National Security Council meeting at the Palace on the Nov. 23 Maguindanao massacre, Press Secretary Cerge Remonde announced at a briefing.

"I'm happy to announce that one of the decisions arrived at ... was the creation of a commission to dismantle private armed groups, especially those related to political clans," Remonde said.

He said the commission would be headed by a retired justice.

Later yesterday, Philippine National Police Director General Jesus Verzosa said the commission that would look into the massacre that claimed at least 57 lives should not only focus on the criminal aspect of the mass murder but must also

Businessmen split over GMA move

By Abigail L. Ho and TJ Burgonio

THE COUNTRY'S BUSINESS leaders are divided over the issue of President Macapagal-Arroyo's controversial decision to seek election to the House of Representatives after her term expires next year.

The Makati Business Club said the President's pursuit of a lower post was part of her long-standing pursuit of constitutional amendments so she can stay on in power.

But the Philippine Chamber of Commerce and Industry said the President's candidacy for a congressional seat in her Pampanga home province was a "non-issue to the business community." Indulging in a discussion and debate on it was a needless distraction from the job of dealing with the global economic crisis, it said.

Cuerpo vows to return to mayor's post

Suspended official cites Palace order

By DJ Yap

SUSPENDED RODRIGUEZ MAYOR PEDRO CUERPO said he will return to his post on Monday on the strength of an order from Malacañang granting a stay in his suspension.

Cuerpo cited an order dated Nov. [illegible] from the Office of the President directing the acting mayor, Vice Mayor [illegible], to "cease and desist" from performing his functions as mayor and relinquish those duties to him.

"Mayor Cuerpo may now reassume his position as municipal mayor in the meantime," the order signed by Executive Secretary Eduardo Ermita said. The Department of Interior and Local Government (DILG) was also directed to execute the order immediately.

Decision

But Cuerpo said the DILG had not acted on the order almost a month after it was first issued, prompting his decision to return to office "whether the DILG will implement (the stay order) or not."

"Otherwise, it will be considered abandonment of duty," he said, adding that his suspension would have lapsed on Dec. 22.

Resistance

Cuerpo said he expected thousands of his supporters to join him in his attempt to come back to work at the town hall Monday.

However, he added that there could be some resistance from the sitting mayor when he reassumes his office.

The suspension order, which was issued by the [illegible] in October, stemmed from an old administrative case filed last year against Cuerpo for the construction of the Slope Stabilization and Control Transport Terminal Project in Barangay San Rafael.

The complainants accused Cuerpo of "gross neglect of duty, dereliction of duty, misconduct in office, unlawful behavior, and conduct prejudicial to the best interest of the service" for pushing through with the project reportedly without the environmental permits.

Graft case

The mayor's actions allegedly resulted in the death of a bulldozer operator, as well as diseases acquired by several children in the area because of dust and smoke from the site.

That suspension order came after a previous suspension slapped on Cuerpo, which lapsed also in October.

It involved a graft case filed by [illegible] town residents against him and two other officials on charges of grave abuse of authority and grave misconduct for allegedly demolishing the houses of [illegible] families on a property in Barangay [illegible] in 2008.

Patient files ₱5.3M-damage suit vs Quezon City hospital

By Julie M. Aurelio and Nancy C. Carvajal

A BRITISH NATIONAL has filed a multi-million peso damage suit against St. Luke's Medical Center (SLMC) after he claimed he fell from his hospital bed and injured himself during his confinement in the facility in 2007.

Richard Kendall asked the court to award him P5.3 million in damages for the hospital's alleged negligence.

Named as defendants in the civil complaint were the SLMC and one of its doctors, Jose Gonzales, who performed corrective orthopedic a surgical procedure on Kendall.

The filing of the damage suit came after Kendall reportedly sent a final demand letter in January 2009 for P5 million to the SLMC and Gonzales, but claimed "no payment was thereafter made."

Gonzales, however, denied Kendall's claim that he fell out of his bed the night after the surgery.

"We had no report of the fall incident, nor did our nurses notice any fall from occurring. The nurses said that the patient was always on his bed every time they visited him," Gonzales said in a statement to the Inquirer.

Confinement

In his damage suit, Kendall claimed Gonzales performed the procedure in June 2007 while he was confined at the SLMC. He added that he was dependent on the staff for his meals, medication, movements and basic personal needs.

"Because of his condition, the plaintiff became a high-fall risk patient and totally dependent on the staff to ensure his total and complete well-being," read Kendall's complaint.

Four days later, on June 18, 2007, the plaintiff alleged he fell three feet from his hospital bed when the railings of the bed were "negligently left unsecured" by the medical staff.

He claimed he was forced to crawl his way back to his bed without any aid despite the excruciating pain and his pleas for help.

Kendall said he called up his wife, Maureen and told her about the incident. She then called up Gonzales to report the incident.

Gonzales reportedly told Maureen that he had heard of the incident, but there was no official report about it logged by the on duty nurses at that time.

Kendall claimed he suffered new injuries, like a fractured hip, as a result of his fall, and that he needed an extended medical procedure. But he claimed he was told the only doctor capable of performing the procedure would only be available after a few months.

He claimed he was finally able to undergo the necessary corrective surgery in November 2007, and learned later that the same doctor was on duty in other hospitals at a lower rate.

"As the plaintiff's medical records would show, the injuries he sustained, particularly the fracture on his left hip, required additional surgeries and medical procedures, causing the plaintiff to extend his stay at the SLMC," the complaint added.

The plaintiff asked the court to award him a total of P5.3 million in actual, moral and exemplary damages and attorney's fees.

The damage suit was raffled off this week to Quezon City Regional Trial Court Branch [illegible] under Judge [illegible] Vergara.

Not possible

Gonzales, on the other hand, said that because of Kendall's weight, it would be impossible for him to fall and not sustain injuries.

"It seemed unlikely for a 200-pound patient in immediate post-operative status to have fallen from and gotten back to bed with no assistance," he said.

Gonzales said Kendall, who had only undergone a hip surgery in another hospital, had consulted the SLMC to address concerns he had on his first surgery.

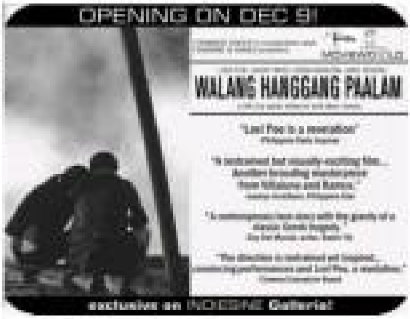

"In a letter from the patient's wife, she mentioned her husband also had nightmares, during the previous days, and thus surmised that he may have dreamed that he fell," Gonzales said.

The doctor also clarified that while an X-ray of his left hip showed a fracture, it should be noted that the patient is also osteoporotic, a condition that weakens the bone and renders it more prone to fractures, even without a fall.

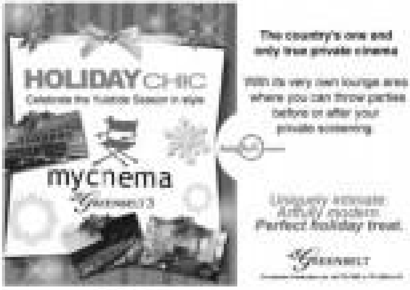

He added that based on medical assessments, there was no need for immediate corrective surgery for the fracture.

In addition, the patient was also suffering from a bleeding condition that had to be addressed first.

"We also advised the patient to wait for his health to improve some more before we could do the surgery," Gonzales said.

PACQUIAO: Early training

Pacquiao-M'weather super fight March 13

By Francis T.J. Ochoa

THE CLASH OF THE TITANS IS ON.

Filipino ring icon Manny Pacquiao and undefeated American superstar Floyd Mayweather have agreed in principle to face off in a potentially record-breaking bout that is expected to gross at least $120 million, Top Rank chief Bob Arum revealed yesterday.

"It's going to be the biggest fight of all time, financially," Arum said yesterday of the highly anticipated showdown, scheduled to take place on March 13, most likely in Las Vegas.

The richest match of all time is the Mayweather-Oscar De La Hoya tiff on May 5, 2007, when the busy "Pretty Boy" outpointed boxing's "Golden Boy." That match grossed $120 million (P5.58 billion) in pay-per-view sales and $19 million in gate revenues.

De La Hoya earned a record $52 million from that fight while Mayweather raked in $25 million.

Arum did not go into the details of the bout, like how much both fighters will earn and how they will split the lucrative PPV income pie.

He said, however, to "freely interpret" the "smile on my face."

Arum met with Pacquiao and his adviser Mike Koncz yesterday morning to discuss the bout that American journalists have said Mayweather...

Experts advise residents to hold on to their properties

ARCHITECT'S perspective of the structure to protect the property from future flooding.

Existing homeowners should work collectively in drawing up flood prevention plans and other strategies to protect the quality of life in their subdivision

By Tessa R. Salazar

SHOULD THEY, OR SHOULD they not?

For Jones Lang LaSalle LeeChiu research head Claro Cordero, victims of recent typhoons "Ondoy" should hold on to their homes for now. Against the consensus of many homeowners in flood and landslide-stricken areas of Antipolo, Cainta and Marikina, Cordero reminds them to review the fundamental attractions of their areas.

National Real Estate Association president Alejandro S. Mañalac agrees with Cordero's advice, saying "there is wisdom in it."

Cordero said any significant downward movement in prices immediately following a disaster would only be temporary.

After more than eight years of observing the industry, Cordero holds the position that prices will most likely normalize over the medium term.

After all, he explains that the valuation of these properties in the past already accounts for the propensity of these areas to flood.

"Selling it now means offering it much lower than its actual value. With the learning that we had with the recent experience taught by the dynamic duo of Ondoy and "Pepeng," we already know better how to prepare... or at least avoid being physically hurt," Mañalac said.

Calamity-proof twin towers

For individuals and families on the lookout for high rises as an alternative to single-level homes (and possibly as a preventive measure against floods), they should keep a keen eye on Ortigas & Co., which recently announced it was on track with the development of its two towers located at the site development of Circulo Verde, the master-planned residential community on Calle Industria in Bagumbayan, Quezon City.

Ortigas & Co. engaged the services of DCCD Engineering Corp., which has 50 years of experience in hydrology and flood control, to meet the technical challenges. Michael Reyes, president and chief operating officer of DCCD, says, "Even in the planning of Circulo Verde, we wanted to prepare for anything. When we gave our parameters to our engineers and architects, we tasked them to provide protection against natural calamities, including earthquakes, flooding and typhoons."

Your Super stalker's guide to the cast of 'glee'

Can't get enough of the hit show? Spend your days between episodes tracking down the Gleeks online

By Bianca Consunji and Pam Pastor

ADMIT IT, YOU'RE AS ADDICTed as we are. We spend days between episodes watching old episodes over and over, we have the soundtrack on 24/7, and we even stalk the cast online.

While Facebook's "Glee" fan page is a gold mine of links about the show—everything, from behind-the-scenes videos to interviews and recordings—we also love going to the Gleeks' personal Twitter, Facebook and Tumblr pages because they show us a glimpse of the real people behind those lovable TV characters.

We also get a kick out of seeing them interact with one another on Twitter.

Your Super guide to stalking the cast of "Glee."

Ready, set, stalk.

Mark Salling

WHO HE PLAYS: Noah Puckerman, Finn's bad boy best friend. He has a soft spot for cougars (and we're not talking about wildlife here), and initially gets into singing to impress PTA mothers. There's an interesting twist to the plot concerning Puck; watch out for it.

FUN FACT: Mark Salling appeared in "Children of the Corn IV."

WHERE TO STALK HIM: On Twitter (http://twitter.com/Mark_Salling) where he posts things like, "Hey will someone please make a puck artie hookup video? Puck + Artie = party!!!" and "Sooo to hit up the Abels thing show and me and baby page wore the same thing!!! Oh the humiliation" and "Hey gleeks, I say u all skip school tomorrow and come see us at borders, what's one day out of the year?" Check out his official website too: (http://www.mark...

Tik Tok Campaign for Climate Action's artist advocates speak up about the environment, climate change and what you can do about it

By Paro Pacho

TIME IS RUNNING OUT.

The Dakila Artist Collective partnered with international NGO Oxfam GB to spread this important message—that we have no time to waste and that we all need to do something about climate change.

Part of the international tck tck tck campaign, Tik Tok Campaign for Climate Action has one mission—to tell Filipinos that action is needed now.

Realizing the importance of protecting our environment, more than 80 artists from different fields—from television and fashion to music and visual arts—joined the campaign to help tell/spread the word.

Around 30 artists recorded the song "No Time To Waste," which has become the Tik Tok Campaign Anthem of the Philippines. A music video was also made. On Dec. 12, a 12-hour concert will be held at the Marikina Riverbanks simultaneously with other events all over the globe to support this advocacy as world leaders meet at a United Nations Conference in Copenhagen, Denmark to talk about climate action.

Super asked some of the campaign's artist advocates to talk about climate change, climate action and why you should spend Dec. 12 with them, pushing for change.

Visit www.tiktokphilippines.com. Visit http://lifestyle.inquirer.net/super to read about other Tik Tok artist advocates.

'Tik Tok Bok' Concert for Climate Action on Dec. 12 at Marikina Riverbanks Amphitheater seeks to raise awareness on global warming

By Ping Medina

I AM PING MEDINA, AN ACTOR BY profession. I like writing scripts. I like new wave music and performers. Although I am color blind, my favorite colors are pink and black.

Recently, I joined the ongoing "Tik Tok" Campaign for Climate Action. It is an offspring of friendship between Oxfam and Dakila. The international campaign name is "Tck Tck Tck," which enjoys the endorsement of Gael Garcia Bernal's sexy Mexican accent and [illegible] well-placed body fat.

Although my brother Pen Medina is a staunch activist who talks about the big stuff, I like talking about the weather.

It started with Barangay [illegible] Kitchen—the craziest thing I've ever done. "Ondoy" made me stay up awake from midnight to nine in the morning repeatedly. It went straight to places like Bulacan and Marikina as food relief for flood victims.

After that, the Oxfam people gave me more work. They took me to General Santos City, home of Manny "Many Money" Pacquiao, the day after he demolished Miguel "Kuto" Cotto. There were no frustration yet, but we learned from the local fisherfolk were totally unaware of the phrase, "pag-babago ng panahon." Their daily catch worth P500 went down to P50. At first they were blaming old issues like dynamite fishing and big company fishing boats. Climate change? No, that's not it, they were saying.

I kept on poking for any sign of disruption. They said that tuna, Gensan's main food product, is harder to catch nowadays. Schools are swimming farther offshore, looking for deeper and cooler waters, away from the ocean's surface, where temperature has been steadily rising.

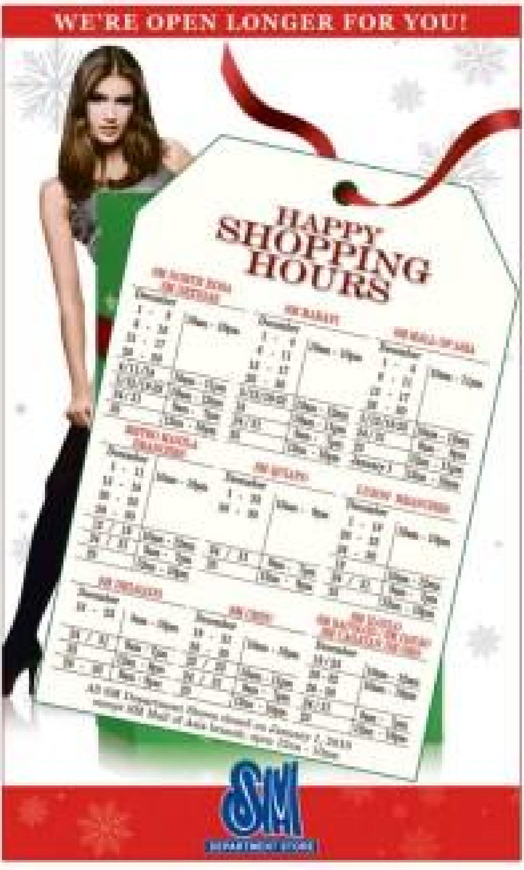

Finally we got our breakthrough.

Lot of work

When we went back to real life, I discovered a lot of work was left behind for our "Tik Tok Bok" concert on Dec. 12. It is the Global Day For Climate Action—simultaneous con-
